Hi there Grandpa. Thank you so much for the generous birthday gift you sent. That was very thoughtful of you. We celebrated my birthday at mom's place on Sunday with a big dinner and good fun. On Tuesday, Bri and I just went out to dinner close to our house ... it has been too cold to go very far.

I have been thinking of you and of Grandma so much this week. I am hoping that you are doing well. Both Jen and Mom told me about the pacemaker which you will soon have. I understand that you will get to go home quickly after the procedure. That makes it easier I hope. I will be thinking of you.

Well, I must get to work. I just wanted to thank you and to let you know that I am thinking of you. Take care.

Love, Kari

The new editor gave me the address of the "Dummies" page which has some interesting information such as the tip below. The address of the home page is <http://www.dummiesdaily.com> if you're interesting in subscribing to any of their list servs. This tip came from the computing basics list serv.

TIP: WHERE DID YOU WANT TO GO TEN YEARS AGO?

February 27th, 1998

Yes, thanks to Windows 95, the most advanced graphical interface in the history of PC computing, the sum total of the latest personal computing technology consolidated on your desktop in an easy-to-use, point-and-click format, you can now--are you seated? you better sit down--you can now ...drum roll, please ... COPY AND PASTE IN DOS!

Talk about anticlimax. Nevertheless, if you still use DOS, you can finally, after some 15 years of frustration, copy what you do in a DOS window and paste it either in another DOS window or in another Windows 95 window. Here's how:

1. In your DOS window toolbar, click the Mark button. (It's the one with the little dotted-line rectangle on it.)
2. Drag to enclose the area containing text you want to copy. (In DOS, you can't select text word by word or line by line; you must draw a box around all text that you want to copy.)
3. Click the Copy button.
4. To paste, position the cursor where you want the material to go (you can put it in a DOS window or in any Windows application); then click the Paste button.

You can't select and "cut" text in a DOS window; but who knows, maybe this miracle will come around with Windows 98.

Talk to you soon.
Marguerite

Mar. 6th, 1998

Dear Calvin:

I never cease to be amazed at the number of people who fled to (?) and were in England in 1709. The lists you sent appear similar to ones I have previously seen.

From everything I have seen and read about Conradt being in England in 1709 I am of the opinion the listing on page 92 is indeed him. I have never however been to find any listing associated with his wife before her marriage. That is her family. I have never seen Gemelck or other spelling which I might consider to be Gemelck but spelled somewhat differently.

As best that I analyze the data concerning the Johann Eyler listing, and Conradt's, I doubt whether Johann could be Conradt's father. Johann is listed as being 50. Conradt is 30 thus Johann would have been about 20 when Conradt was born. Logical enough but then Johann's 7 children are shown as being born 2 to 3 years apart in age. Again logical enough but if they are siblings of Conradt there is 15 years between Johann's eldest child (15) as shown and Conradt who is 30. Not very logical all things considered. Also Johann is shown as having a 3 mos old child. If his wife is Johann's age that is not logical. If she is younger, say 35 (oldest child +20) she would have been 5 when Conradt was born. There could be a 2nd wife or many other possibilities of course. But, who knows for sure.

I don't find in my files any record I have heretofore created relative to this Johann. Of course the info concerning him and his family is very limited but I should enter (and now have) what we do know about him as limited as it is. Other records of course show our Conradt's father being C Michael. I suppose the C could stand for Conradt also.

Thanks for thinking of me with this data. It's always nice to hear from you.

Sincerely,

FLASH ALERT

Asia Crisis Near an End:
Stay Calm, Scoop Up Bargains at Home and Abroad

Wednesday afternoon, October 29, 1997

Dear Subscriber:

The "Asian flu" that has gripped world stock markets over the past few weeks—and frightened investors everywhere—is on its way to a cure. The fever broke October 29, when the Hong Kong market soared almost 19%, by far its largest one-day gain ever.

No doubt, there will still be some aches and pains ahead. The road to recovery seldom follows a straight line. However, the worst is over.

Don't think about selling anything. Thanks to our balanced approach, we were cushioned against much of this week's market shocks. (After all, almost half of our portfolio is in bonds and cash—which both went up in value when the market plummeted.) This is a time to buy—calmly, carefully and selectively. The recent market turmoil has created too many bargains in too many places to sit on the sidelines.

Currencies: The Root of the Illness

Why am I so confident "the worst is over"? Remember how the trouble started, with the devaluation of the Thai currency (the baht) in July. One after another, the other leading Southeast Asian currencies came under attack, and fell—until only the mighty Hong Kong dollar was left.

Since 1983, Hong Kong has pegged its currency firmly to the U.S. dollar. Would the local authorities stand their ground, or would they give in to the speculators and cut the peg? The world wanted to see.

As it turned out, Hong Kong kept the faith. By raising interest rates as high as 300% at one point, Hong Kong's currency board drove the speculators away. The medicine took only three or four days to work. Now interest rates are just about back to normal, and the Hong Kong dollar is safe again.

It will take much longer, of course, for investors to regain confidence in the battered currencies of Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines and Thailand. Nonetheless, there's every reason to believe these currencies will eventually rebound from today's depressed levels—just as the Mexican peso did after its harrowing fall in 1995.

Like the peso back then, the Asian Tiger currencies are now ridiculously cheap in terms of what a (U.S.) dollar will buy in those countries. Mexico staged a dramatic comeback—because the cheap peso touched off an export explosion. The Tigers will almost surely follow suit.

Stick With Your Asian Investments

I've had a lot of experience with mob psychology, but I'll be the first to admit that even I was surprised by the scale of the recent panic selling in Asian stock markets. Fundamentally, the Asian Tiger countries are in far better shape than Mexico was prior to the 1995 crisis. Economic growth is stronger, inflation is lower, the savings rate is higher, the workforce is better educated and so on.

Accordingly, I think the rebound (once it gets under way) is likely to be stronger and longer-lasting. Certain ultra-depressed markets like Korea and Thailand stand a good chance of tripling over the next three to five years. The region as a whole should easily double over the same period.

So be patient. Hang on to every Asian stock or mutual fund you've purchased—and if you've got spare cash, consider buying more (up to a prudent limit). In general, I think

YOUR PASSPORT TO PROFITS

November 1997, Vol. XVIII, No.11

1997: Greatest Buying Opportunity Since 1987?

Dear Subscriber,

October lived up to its reputation, once again, recalling frightening similarities between 1987 and 1997: From 1984 and to mid-1987, the Dow Jones index climbed roughly 100%. After that, it plunged 35%.

Now, the U.S. stock market has repeated the first half of that dismal history. The Dow climbed more than 100% from 1994 to 1997. Then, last week, we saw another 500-plus point one-day drop, just like 1987. Will we see another 35% crash? Probably not. But I have told you, over and over again, that no one knows the future. If you just watch TV or read the financial press, you would think legions of experts already know the future:

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve, warned us again last month that stock and bond prices could not keep climbing straight up much longer. And Warren Buffett said he was buying bonds, because stocks were priced so high.

Now, they seem like incredible prophets of doom, because the U.S. market went into a panic last week. In addition, several Asian stock markets crashed, including Hong Kong last Tuesday.

Report From the Front Lines. . .

(from my hotline, recorded in Indonesia, Tuesday, October 28)

When the crowd panics, we must remain calm. I suspect that when the dust settles on this market plunge, the recovery will be much faster than the 1987 recovery. The health of any nation's underlying economy is rooted in its people—not in economic theory, and certainly not in investor sentiment.

The economic fundamentals today remain positive, as billions of people in Asia, the U.S. (and now even Europe) are working hard to better their lives. Hold on to every one of our great stocks, and plan to buy more shares at these bargain prices. In fact, the last Hong Kong market plunge, in 1989, opened the way for my subscribers to make 300% profits in just two years; now, it can happen again.

The gloom-and-doom crowd loves to see these awful events unfold—like high inflation, rising interest rates, or a 20% (to 40%) stock market collapse. Those of us with a more positive point of view seldom get much press attention, because the overconfident doomsayers can be quite convincing. But let's take a moment to recall the lessons of 10 years ago, and apply them to today's market.

On October 19, 1987, the Dow Jones Industrial Average fell 22.6%. The doomsayers convinced just about everyone that this was the beginning of an economic collapse—just like 1929 and the Great Depression. Terrified investors by the thousands sold stocks and began hoarding cash. Most professional investors reacted last week just like they did 10 years ago—in panic. Like 1987, the media had a field day, and the gloom-and-doom crowd battled each other to get credit for predicting this crash.

What did you do last week? From your calls so far, I know that 99% or more of my subscribers did what I did, and what I've said in each issue: Hold on to our great stocks, and buy more, at these lower prices. (I am so proud of my subscribers!)

While Others Panic, We'll Profit

The crash of 1987 was far from a disaster. The crash was, in fact, a magnificent buying opportunity. Stocks were beaten down to extraordinary lows, from which they made a quick recovery. The Dow Jones Industrial Average actually rose (2%) in 1987, and reached new peaks by July 1989. Many stocks recovered far quicker. The crash of 1987 proved to be just a temporary change in sentiment.

Faced with one of the greatest opportunities in stocks in this century, many ran for cover, like so many scared rabbits. I don't know if I influenced many investors after the 1987 crash, but I sure tried! The entire newsletter business fell on hard times 10 years ago. Tens of thousands of investors canceled their subscriptions. I did my best to rally the troops that remained. For example, 10 years

Summary of comments by Michael Landry

While we don't wish to minimize the magnitude of today's market move, it is important to keep things in perspective. The benefit of a decade's (reference October 1987) hindsight should be some comfort to investors watching current turmoil in stock markets around the globe.

The current degree of pessimism surrounding Asian markets is unprecedented. Although recent turmoil in currency markets is likely to have a negative impact on growth, we believe that economics within the region should continue to enjoy the highest growth rates in the world over the next 10 years.

Fundamentals for Latin America remain intact. Macroeconomic stabilization has substantially decreased the risks of investing in the region. Pent-up demand for infrastructure and a growing consumer market should continue to contribute to above-average top-line growth across the region. Privatization and restructuring are expected to contribute to accelerating earning growth going forward.

The most important thing to do right now is not panic. At this point it's too late to sell. Hold tight and focus on long-term fundamentals. Remember that sentiment-driven markets create opportunities for investors with a long-term horizon. As the dust settles, we will continue to focus on looking for hidden value using broad based diversification to minimize risk and maximize returns.

Summary of comments by Jim Broadfoot

As investors lick their wounds, they're asking: is this a buying opportunity, as corrections have been for the last ten years.

Since the correction began, the rates on US Treasuries have actually declined as investors have sought a safe haven. Moreover, devalued currencies and slower growth in Asia should reinforce the disinflationary trend here in the US and in the near term make it very unlikely the Federal Reserve will tighten monetary policy.

So, if the interest rate outlook has improved, why have stocks gone down? Obviously, investors are less sanguine about earning. They are concerned that slower economic growth in Asia could translate into lower demand for the output of US multinationals. And they fear that certain technology products and capital good could be most vulnerable, particularly as Asian authorities tighten credit to defend their beleaguered currencies.

Overall, we are confident that our portfolio companies will continue to generate strong earnings growth which will eventually drive their stock prices higher. It's impossible to know if this will happen tomorrow, next week, next month or next quarter. During turbulent time like these, investors are best served by taking a longer term perspective so they can turn volatility into opportunity.
